HDM-4 Licence Options

Full Licence

The full version comes supplied with fully documented case studies to allow a new user to quickly investigate the main feature of the software. All the features of HDM-4 Version 2 are available to the user.

REGISTERING YOUR LICENCE

The Academic and Full licences require the software to be registered.

The software can be registered as a standalone licence, or with a floating network license.

Network licensing requires the additional installation of a Network Licence Server on a supported Windows platform.

Educational / Training / Academic Licences

An example workspace is preconfigured with a number of fully documented examples. This enables a user to investigate the range of analyses that HDM-4 Version 2 can perform. The user may also modify the supplied examples or create their own data to gain familiarisation and experience with the software and to undertake small case studies of their own.

The Academic version has some functional limitations - see table on following page.

Demonstration Licences

An example workspace is preconfigured with a number of fully documented examples. This enables a user to investigate the range of analyses that HDM-4 Version 2 can perform.

The Demonstration version has some functional limitations - see table on following page.

CONVERTING YOUR LICENCE

It is not necessary to register a Demonstration licence.

A Demonstration licence can be converted to another type of licence by purchasing a Full or Academic licence, which will unlock the software to provide access to its functionality.
